It is well known that a merchant who deals entirely in one line of goods buying largely from manufacturers is enabled to give his customers advantages in prices and assortment (in that line of goods) that are not to be found in stores professing to do all kinds of business.
I shall aim therefore to make it the interest of all in want of the above goods, to buy at the regular Carpet and Oil Cloth Store.
Dealers can buy of me by the roll at wholesale prices.

THE ÆTNA STILL AHEAD.
IT has been tried and has never failed to give satisfaction to the purchaser. Farmers will find it to their advantage to call on the subscriber during the April court and examine the above machine. It will be on exhibition at the Court House in Huntingdon during the two weeks of court.
It is a combined Machine; can be changed from a Mower to a Reaper in a few minutes; can be worked with a slow team, it being higher geared than other machines and the draft being reduced to the lowest attainable point. Reaping and Mowing with the Ætna is no harder on the team than plowing oats and stubble. It is believed by all who have tried it that it is the machine best adapted to the wants of the farmers in this county. It has no side draft and no weight on the horses' necks.
We will also have one of the Wood Reapers and Mowers on the ground at the same time. Farmers intending to purchase machines this season will do well to examine the above machines before purchasing elsewhere. All you want is to examine the Ætna to enable you to make up your mind what machine to buy. I am the authorized agent of Messrs. Wharton & Maguire for the above machines, also for the Willoughby Gum spring Drill.
I will also have one of the famous Hampson Hay-forks on hand, which every farmer should examine whether he needs a fork or not. Every farmer should have one. They are the best in the market. No farmer that tries one could be induced to purchase any other kind. I have the exclusive right of this county. Wharton & Maguire are my agents for the sale of the above Hay Fork. Any other person selling the above Fork in Huntingdon county will be dealt with according to law in such cases. Don't forget where to call. At Wharton & Maguire's, or at the Court House during court week.

PERSEVERANCE.

Take the spade of perseverance,
Dig the field of progress wide,
Every bar to true instruction
Carry out and cast aside;
Every stubborn weed of error,
Every seed that hurts the soil,
Tares, whose very growth is terror,
Dig them out, whate'er the toil.

Give the streams of education
Broader channel, bolder force;
Hurl the stones of persecution
Out where'er they block its course.
Seek for strength in self-exertion;
Work and still have faith to wait;
Close the crooked gate to fortune;
Make the road to honor straight.

Men are agents for the future!
As they work, so ages win
Either harvests of advancement!
Or the product of their sin;
Follow out true cultivation,
Widen education's plan;
From the majesty of nature
Teach the majesty of man.

DOCTOR BLANCHARD,
OR
THE BACHELOR'S LOVE.

BY TRAVE.

"Behold the works of God," said he aloud, forgetting the second person was absent. "Hark!" he continued, "who is singing?

Sweet strains of music greet my ear,
Sweet harmony."

A lady had seated herself on the portico in front of the brick mansion with guitar in hand, and possessing no knowledge of any one being near began, and closed in melodious vocal chords:

"Love's eye should but answer the beam that invites it
The glance that tells secrets to the heart never won,
The delicate mind veils the hope that requites it,
Lest it die, like the fire when exposed to the sun.

"Dear woman's the exquisite magnet of nature,
And love is the heart-thrilling homage we pay
But Beauty has not a more delicate feature, [play.
Than the caution that Love should, if grateful dis-

"That name to the heart which sweet transport discloses
Too sacred should be for a toast or a tale;
And the breathings of Love, like the perfumes of roses,
Are exquisite death when surcharging the gale."

"How beautiful, enrapturing—isn't she angelic," remarked the Doctor to himself.

At this juncture a gentleman came through the hall door, stepped to the side of the lady and seated himself.

"Why Clare I didn't know you had arrived, you appear before me like a spirit," remarked the lady.

"Now Olive, you will confer a favor on your brother, by not having him appear a second Hamlet's ghost," replied Clare.

Now the Doctor always had an affectionate smile for Mrs. Climpson's frequent visitor Miss May DeForest and often acknowledged he felt "queer" when in her presence, but at this time he felt a stranger sensation. Why was it? Because he assumed the accidental position of eaves dropper? Was it because he did not appreciate his position when compared to Clare's? Or was it Miss Olive? Such questions presented themselves to him. "O shocking! such ideas," he muttered, but still the sensation was not eradicated.

How to get out of the yard unnoticed was the next consideration. "Critical circumstances indeed," thought Doctor. Scarcely had he thought, when Olive took from her lap a paper, handed it to Clare and asked, "what he thought of C*'s production in the 'Cassaon,' respecting old ——." "Wonder what the 'Doc' thought of it," asked Clare with a smile, before Olive had finished her interrogation. "Do you know the author Clare?" asked Olive. "He is not far from you," answered Clare. "Was it you?" further questioned Olive. "You know Olive I am always frank and ready to answer your interrogations, both pointedly and truthfully, it was," said Clare.

The conversation between Clare and Olive was short. They soon left the portico. Fortunately for the Doctor. He took the opportunity and quickly made his exit through the gate which he had entered.

It will be after midnight when I get home, thought he.

Some men are born for luck, and so it appeared with the Doctor, for a farmer on his road to town had caught the horse, knowing it to be the Doctor's and brought it back all right excepting the hitching strap. The Doctor reached home before midnight. Took tea, smoked his "havana" and retired to dream of Olive and the events of the day.

Morning approached, the Doctor sat in the old arm chair, seriously meditating:

"Why should I blush to own I love?
'Tis love that rules the realms above.
Why should I blush to say to all
That virtue holds my heart in thrall?"

What is the use thinking about Olive Roulette (?) She is wealthy while my circumstances are very moderate. She has had an advantage in classical education while mine is limited. My thoughts of her are all useless.

"Doctor, here's a note which was left for you last evening," said Mrs. Climpson after politely rapping and receiving admittance at the door.

The Doctor read it as follows:

DOCTOR:—Your company is solicited at —— on Thursday evening next, to participate in a sail on the Lake. Boat to leave the landing at 7 o'clock, p. m. Don't disappoint us.

Your friend, JOHN.

P. S.—Bring a lady with you.

"When will your friend May be with you, Mrs. Climpson?" asked the Doctor.

"This afternoon," was Mrs. Climpson's reply.

"Thank you," the Doctor remarked with a bow and Mrs. Climpson left the door.

"What a pleasant time it will be," thought the Doctor, "Sailing on the lake by moonlight is always pleasant when alone, but pleasanter with company, especially May. This afternoon I will see May and have her along."

But imagine the Doctor's dismay, at the arrival of the time, when May made her appearance at Mrs. Climpson's with Clare They were on their way to the lake. Bad state of affairs but no remedy. The Doctor consoled himself as well as he could under circumstances and remained at home. That evening, Mrs. Climpson informed him "Clare and May were engaged." And further she informed him if he could keep a secret she would tell him the appointed wedding day." He promised secrecy and was informed.

"Procrastination is well named a thief, thought the Doctor, for it with backwardness has robbed me of my brightest anticipation. What will I do?"

The day appointed for the bridal festival arrived, but unlike the one anticipated. Our pleasure is frequently disturbed by the shifting scenes of time. So it was with Clare. The Rebellion had already resounded through our land. From north to south, and from east to west it echoed and re-echoed, striking terror to every Union patriot. Rebels were tramping everywhere on our borders like infuriated Texan horses before a burning prairie. The town in which Clare and May resided was marauded during night by a band of rebel guerrillas and every Union man was obliged to escape, or else endure the inflictions meted out by those unmerciful wretches of secession. Among the number who escaped, was Clare. As we have Clare's word for it, "he beat a quick retreat from his native town to stronger Union refuge." At Carlisle he enlisted, that such infamous insult as our national ensign received at the first shot of Charleston might be retaliated. His whereabouts was not known until the invasion of the old Keystone State. In vain did the family watch for a missive, or word from Clare, but every mail produced the same monotonous result. May had received a short letter the day before the battle of Gettysburg and that was the last. Weeks rolled on and no word.

"Strange that no comrade saw him. Was he killed? If so he certainly would have been found. Was he wounded we would have soon heard it. Was he taken prisoner, I think we would have been informed, besides, I think he could write, remarked the Major to Olive one evening when the mystery was the topic of conversation.

Nine months rolled their ample round and still no word from Clare. A year brought the same sad result. Clare certainly was dead.

By this time a new era had opened. Secession had concentrated at more particular points than the town of H——. Where danger was apparent safety now reigned supreme. The Doctor and May had became very intimate. Indeed it was the town gossip that they would be made united recipients of connubial felicity. The day for the wedding was appointed—every preparation was made and the conversation everywhere in the neighborhood was "Dr. Blanchard and May DeForrest are to be married."

The appointed bridal day came. Busy were the inmates at the house of DeForests'. Already had guests gathered and others were arriving. The appointed hour drew nigh. Yet still they came. All were happy, gay and festive till the appearance of the father of Divinity, when a sudden silence o'er came them all. They awaited the ceremony. Suddenly a shriek was distinctly heard, and then a crash. The house was a house of confusion. There stood Clare Roulette and there laid, in a swoon May DeForrest. Immediately the furtherance of ceremony was postponed; the numerous guests left for their homes and again quietness prevailed. May soon revived. Clare was welcomed and made a guest with Dr. Blanchard at the DeForests'. The cause of his long silence was made known. At the battle of Gettysburg he was taken prisoner, hurried to Richmond, from thence to Andersonville. His emaciated face, pucsine arm and feeble step were all omens of the workings in that destructive den of Southern chivalry. After the breaking up of that chivalric slaughter pen, Clare with many others were placed in the hands of surgeons. Being nearly beyond physician's skill he required great attention, was conveyed to a separate apartment and kept in silence. In this condition he remained a few days before his arrival. How he happened to arrive on the very day May was to be married was a mystery.

What disposition was made of the Doctor I know not, but it is only necessary to say that Clare Roulette and May DeForrest, were married in one month after the confusion and two months later Dr. Blanchard and Olive Roulette the "idolized" stood at the altar of the hymenial bliss at the Major's. Such a wedding was never recorded in the history of that town.

Concluded.

TWO KISSES FOR A DIME.—As a weary traveler was wending his way through the mud in a far west region of the country, he discovered a young maiden seated in front of the door of a small log house. He rode up in front of the cabin, and asked the girl for a drink of water. He drank it, and she being the first woman he had seen for weeks, offered her a dime for a kiss. The young maiden accepted the offer, and received both the kiss and the dime. The traveler was about to resume his journey, but the girl never having seen a dime before, asked "What am I to do with the dime?" "You may use it as you wish," he replied, "it is yours." "If that's the case," said she, "I'll give you back the dime and take another kiss."

Montana.

Gov. Ashley has commenced his official service by appointing Beuno Speyer, Esq, Commissioner of Immigration, and has addressed him a letter giving an account of his Territory, which we condense as follows:

Montana was organized by Congress in May, 1864, and is bounded on the north by British America, on the south and west by the Bitter Root and Rocky Mountains, and on the east by the 27th degree westward from Washington City. Its area is 143,776 square miles, being four times that of Ohio and eighteen times that of Massachusetts. Congress, in organizing it, gave it for the support of schools over 5,000,000 acres of public lands—which exceeds the entire area of Rhode Island, Connecticut and Delaware.

Gold was first discovered in what is now Montana in the fall of 1862; and some four or five thousand miners and others rushed thither within the next few months. Gov. Ashley estimates the present population at 70,000, and expects it to be swelled this year to 100,000. We presume the census of 1870 will show that it has more than that number. The Winter on this side of the Rocky Mountains is like that of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio; west of the main ridge, it is milder The summers are cooler than ours. Cattle winter unfed almost anywhere. The soil of the valleys is rich, and easily tilled. The atmosphere east of the mountains is dry, and irrigation of the table lands is required. The climate is very healthy.

The mountains, save where they rise above the line of vegetation, are covered with pine, cedar, and other valuable timber. Montana is probably the best timbered of all our Territories save Washington. The scenery is magnificent. The valleys of the Madison, Jefferson, Gallatin, and other affluents of the Missouri, are very fertile; the opposite valleys of the streams which unite to form the Columbia, are less so. The former are excellent for wheat, rye, and oats, as well as for grass. The city of Helena, founded in 1865, has now 14,000 inhabitants, with three daily papers.

The Northern Pacific Railroad, beginning at the southwest point of Lake Superior, will pass directly through this Territory, and traverse a splendid farming country. It will be in good part constructed within the next five years. After crossing the Rocky Mountains, its route to the Pacific Ocean lies through a dense growth of heavy timber, mainly pine, cedar, hemlock and cottonwood. The snows here are far lighter than on the Central route. Fifty steamboats reached Ft. Benton last spring, with an average of 240 tuns of merchandise each, and large parties of immigrants.

Gov. Ashley estimates the gold and silver mined in this Territory since 1864 at $80,000,000. The Surveyor General estimates the yield of gold only the present year at $20,000,000. Some of the placers have proved exceedingly productive, and the veins promise as bounteous a yield. Copper, iron, coal and salt have also been found in abundance, though they have received little attention as yet.

RICHES.—The acquisition of riches seems, from the beginning of time, to have been one of man's universal passions. Many causes have tended to inspire it. In the hands of the good, riches have been a blessing; but who will say that in the hands of the majority riches have not been a corrupter and a curse? The maddest and the saddest lives have been spent in the accumulation of riches. Yet there is no evil in wealth. It is not money, but the love of money that is root of evil. When the pursuit of fortune does not curtail the humanities, and its possession enlarges rather than diminishes man's aspiration to do good and be useful among men, riches are fair and lovely as the wings of ministering angels. It is a noble feeling, and worthy of his exalted character, that man should desire to surround himself with comfort and independence. This feeling may be cherished without undue selfishness or hardening of the heart, and the more of this world's goods the true man possesses, the more suffering and want he can relieve. Sought rightly as a means, riches are a noble pursuit; sought and hoarded as an end they are base and contemptible.

SELF RELIANCE.—I have great confidence in young men who believe in themselves, and are accustomed to rely on their own resources from an early period. When a resolute young fellow steps at the great bully, the World, and takes him boldly by the beard, he is often surprised to find it come off in his hands, and that it was only tied on to scare timid adventurers. I have seen young men more than once, who came to a great city without a single friend, support themselves and pay for their education, lay up money, in a few years grow rich enough to travel, and establish themselves in life without ever asking a dollar of any person which they had not earned. But these are exceptional cases. There are horse-tamers born so, we all know; there are women-tamers who bewitch the sex as the pied piper bedeviled the children of Hamelin; and there are the world-tamers who can make any community, even a Yankee one, get down and let them jump on its back as easily as Mr. Rarey saddled Cruiser.

Utterly Impossible

That the old lady who believes in "signs and symptoms," always looks out for the new moon over her left shoulder, and never makes pickles on a Friday, will not know "something to happen" within the year, particularly if she has the bad luck to break the looking glass! As the old Dutch farmer said, "Things is always happening, most years!"

That the man who says, "plenty of time, there's no hurry," should not miss the boats, lose the trains, and get generally behindhand! Just notice whether people that have "plenty of time," don't usually end with having no time at all.

That the woman who puts off her baking until the washing is done, and the washing until the weather is a little warmer, and sits down to read a dog's-eared novel in the meantime, should have anything but a drinking husband, shiftless children, and a desolate home!

That the man who carries his hands in his trowsers pockets, should ever possess anything else to carry in his pockets!

That the young lady who sleeps in kid gloves, and powders her face "for the benefit of her complexion," should have more than her share of common sense!

That the man who wears an imitation diamond ring, will ever own a real one! For mock jewelry indicates a lack of brains, and it takes a certain amount of brains to make money enough for real diamonds, or anything else that is genuine.—From Phrenological Journal.

DRESS.—Fanny Fern in a recent article, talks to the ladies as follows:

"Children going out of fashion?"—Let us be thankful if it is so, and if they are to have mothers like those of whom I have been speaking. "Mothers!" how dare they so profane this name? It was only yesterday I stopped in the street to soothe a little atom, sobbing in her lace and satin, from a slapping just received from her nurse, for getting a spot on her little dress in the dirty streets of New York, through which she was going. "You shall have nothing to eat, you shall be put to bed without any supper!" screamed the nurse, as the little one's tears fell fast. "You are a bad little thing, to soil your pretty new dress."

You should have seen the swollen eyes and forlorn little face looking up at the coarse girl who was twitching her about. And all that misery for a spot on the gya clothes, put on to feed the vanity of some foolish mother, who had sent out the baby, for it could but just walk, to enjoy the fresh air, with the perpetual nightmare of "dress" fettering and cramping every free and proper and natural movement. I could but kiss the strange little one, and try to stop the nurse's threats of "no supper." Very likely I made matters worse by caressing it, but it wasn't nature to "pass by on the other side," at least not in my nature, to which any sort of injustice is like a red tag to a mad bull.

Dress—dress—dress! When will women learn that simplicity is beauty? When will they learn that a profusion of ornamentation is ugliness? When will they learn to put health and intelligence before fine clothes? And when will sensible men learn to be ashamed of perpetuating these evils by flattering the very women whom they ridicule remorselessly behind their backs?

THINGS WORTH FORGETTING.—It is almost frightful, and altogether humiliating, to think how much there is in the common on-going of domestic and social life, which deserves nothing but to be instantly and forever forgotten. Yet it is equally amazing how large a class seem to have no other business but to repeat and perpetuate these very things. That is the vocation of gossips,—an order of society that perpetuates more mischief than all the combined plagues of Egypt together. You may have noticed how many speeches there are which become mischievous only by being heard a second time; and what an army of both sexes are sworn to see to it, that the fatal repetition shall be had. Blessed is that man or woman that can let drop all the burs and thistles, instead of picking them up, and fastening them on to the next passenger. Would we only let the vexing and malicious sayings die, how fast the lacerated and scandal-ridden world would get healed and tranquilized.

The more quiet and peaceably we get on, the better—the better for ourselves, the better for our neighbors. In nine cases out of ten, the wisest course is, if a man cheats you, to cease dealing with him; if he is abusive, quit his company; if he slanders you, take care to live so that nobody will believe him.

My rule is deliberately to consider, before I commence, whether the thing is practicable. If it be not practicable, I do not attempt it. If it be practicable, I can accomplish it, if I give sufficient pains to it; and having begun, I never stop till the thing is done. To this rule I owe all my success.—John Hunter.

"Remember whom you are talking to, sir!" said an indignant parent to a fractious boy; "I am father, sir!" "Well, who's to blame for that?" said young impertinence; "taint me!"

Benefit your friends, that they may love you still more dearly; benefit your enemies, that they may become your friends.

The Globe.

HUNTINGDON, PA.

Wednesday morning, June 2, 1869.

WM. LEWIS, HUGH LINDSAY, } EDITORS.

The "Globe" has the largest number of readers of any other paper published in the county. Advertisers should remember this.

To Our Friends and Patrons.

Until we give notice to the contrary, we will issue to all paying us money on subscription to Globe, advertising, job work and old store bills, chance checks for presents in our Enterprise. Now is the time to subscribe, advertise, have your bills, etc., printed, and for all indebted to us to pay up.

☞We have authority for saying that Hon. D. J. Morrell is not a candidate for Governor.

☞The Pennsylvania Central Road is first in the field in making a through connection from the seaboard to Chicago. The lease with the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne, and Chicago Road has been signed by the Directors of both Companies. The lease is perpetual, and is mutually advantageous.

The Union of the Presbyterians.

After a separate existence of over thirty years, the Old and New School branches of the Presbyterian Church, on Thursday last, decided, through their representatives in the Assemblies convened in New York City to re-unite and form hereafter a single church. The report was unanimously reported; in the New School it was unanimously adopted, and in the Old School there were but eight dissenting voices. Although the plan is to be submitted to the various Presbyteries for approval, it may be considered that the question of re-union is virtually settled.

The Dead Soldiers.

The ceremony of decorating the graves of fallen soldiers in our midst transpired on Saturday last, and was witnessed by hundreds of our citizens from different parts of the county. What a fitting tribute to the memory of the fallen! was the exclamation of many. Whose heart, on witnessing such a scene as that of last Saturday, would not go out in appreciation of the deeds of the soldiers "who have sank to rest, by all their country's wishes blest." What those deeds were it is needless for us to recall, as the events of the late rebellion are too fresh in our memory to be so soon forgotten. Enough be the epitaph—"They died for their country!" What prouder title or nobler heritage for man to win and leave than that of being a martyr at his country's shrine.

Small tribute indeed is the annual assembling at the graves of the departed soldiers when compared with the magnitude of the services rendered by them; but that little we are glad to see is rendered cheerfully and spontaneously by our citizens, without any distinction of party. All who could come, we believe did come; and their presence, of itself, was an earnest of the esteem in which the people of Old Huntingdon county held their fallen heroes. Everybody appeared impressed with the ceremonies, as conducted under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic of this place; and we would here extend our congratulations to this noble order, composed of the living soldiers of the Republic, for their praiseworthy effort in thus keeping fresh in our memories the record of their fallen comrades, who, (will we say it?) might have been forgotten had it not been for this step taken by them.

We repeat, then, let not the dead soldiers be forgotten; and let us regularly gather at their graves and strew "flowers, sweet flowers;" but while we cheerfully bestow this outward manifestation of regard, let us keep ever in our hearts the memory of their noble services as rendered against the enemies of our country, the fruits of which we are to day enjoying.

"'Tis but a mound—and will be mossed
Whenever the summer grass appears;
The loved, though wept, are never lost;
We only lose our tears.

Nay, hope may whisper with the dead,
My bending forward where they are;
But memory, with a backward tread,
Communes with them afar!"

☞Miss Olive Logan, who left the stage four years ago to pursue literature, in a letter to the editor of the New York Times, says that when girls go into a theatre to apply for a situation now-a-days, they find that the requirements of managers are expressed in the following questions. These questions show such a deplorable state of public morals that comment is unnecessary:

1. "Is your hair dyed yellow?"
2. "Are your legs, arms and bosom symmetrically formed, and are you willing to expose them?"
3. "Can you sing brassy songs, and dance the can-can, and wink at men, and give utterance to disgusting half words which mean whole actions?"
4. "Are you acquainted with any rich men who will throw you flowers, and send you presents, and keep afloat dubious rumors concerning your chastity?"
5. "Are you willing to appear to-night, and every night, amid the glare of gaslights and before the gaze of thousands of men, in this pair of satin breeches ten inches long, without a vestige of drapery on your person?"

"If you can answer these questions affirmatively, we will give you a situation. If not, there's the door."

☞Pacific Railroad fare is a subject of interest to everybody, because everybody's taxes helped to build the road. The general ticket agent of the Central Pacific of California announces that no pro rata tickets nor coupons issued by any other railroad will be received by that road; and that the passenger fare will be ten cents per mile in gold. If this be a correct statement of the policy of this road, then it is but another illustration of the heartlessness and shortsightedness of monopolies. There is no excuse for any such rates of fare. The road has not cost the stockholders one dollar. It has been built by the money of the nation; but the managers of the Central Pacific assuming that they have a monopoly, and that travel and traffic must pass over their line, now propose to charge ten cents per mile, in gold, for passenger fare over their share of the road. It is an outrage and an extortion to which the American people will not submit.

A Very Singular Will---A Novel Infirmary.

From the Columbus [Ohio] Jonrnal, May 22.

Yesterday we heard of and read part of the most singular will on record. The maker of this will is represented to be a shrewd, successful business man, who has accumulated quite a large fortune. He exhibits no other signs of insanity than may be derived from the extreme eccentricity of his will, although it is probable the courts will, in due course, be called upon to determine the question whether the testator was of sound and disposing mind.

The will disinherits all the natural heirs of the maker of it, and devises the entire property in trust for the establishment of an infirmary for cats. A most elaborate architectural plan for the necessary buildings is attached to and made part of the will. It provides areas for that sweet amatory converse so dear to the feline heart, and rat holes of the most ravishing nature, to be kept well stocked. The most ingenious contrivances are provided for securing to the rat a chance to escape, so that the cats may not lose the pleasures of the chase by finding their prey come to easily. High walls are to be built with gently sloping roofs, for moonlight promenade and other nocturnal amusements of the cats.

The trustees are directed to select the grounds for this novel infirmary in the most populous part of some American city, and the devises are to be protected by a competent force of nurses from the ravages of men and dogs. No person of the male sex is ever to be admitted within the walls, and no female who has children or is under thirty years old. There are hundreds of minute directions which we have no time to note.

One would suppose that in the foregoing provisions the testator had exhausted all the eccentricities of one man, however unique his nature; but the last provision of the will seems more outrageously bizarre than any that go before. Says the devisor: "I have all my life been taught to believe that everything in and about man was intended to be useful, and that it was man's duty, as lord of animals, to protect all the lesser species, even as God protects and watches over him.—For these two combined reasons—first, that my body, even after death, may continue to be made useful; and secondly, that it may be made instrumental, as far as possible, in furnishing a substitute for the protection of the bodies of my dear friends, the cats—I do hereby devise and bequeath the intestines of my body to be made up into fiddlestrings, the proceeds to be devoted to the purchase of an accordeon, which shall be played in the auditorium of the Cat Infirmary by one of the regular nurses to be selected for that purpose exclusively—the playing to kept up for ever and ever, without cessation day and night, in order that the cats may have the privilege of always hearing and enjoying that instrument which is the nearest approach to their natural voice."

If any journal can give us information of a more singular will than this, we should like to hear of it.

FIVE CENTS' WORTH OF ORANGE PEEL.—A man from the country invested five cents, in Hartford, Conn., in the purchase of an orange, and preparatory to getting himself outside of it, threw the peel on the sidewalk.—Soon after a young woman came along, slipped upon the peel and fell, breaking her leg. The woman was to have been married the next day, but wasn't. The man who was to marry her had come from St. Paul, Minn., and was obliged to return on account of business, to await the recovery of the girl. On his way back he unfortunately took a train on the Erie railroad, which ran off the track, and his shoulder blade was broken, forcing him to stop at Dunkirk for repairs. On getting back to St. Paul, he found that his forced absence had upset a business arrangement which he had expected to complete, at a pecuniary loss to him of $5,000. Meantime the injured girl suffered a relapse, which so enfeebled her health that her marriage was delayed, which had a bad effect upon the young man, and he finally broke the engagement and married a widow in Minnesota with four small children. This so worked upon the mind of the girl that she is now in the insane hospital in Middletown, Connecticut. Her father, outraged by the conduct of the young man, brought a suit for breach of promise, and has just recovered ten thousand dollars. The anxiety and expense of the whole affair thus far have been enormous, as anybody can see. Similar cases are likely to occur, so long as people will persist in throwing orange peel around loose.

FINANCIAL SLANG.—The words and phrases which have crept into use among brokers and speculators would form quite an interesting collection. For example, there are 'bulls' and 'bears,' 'shorts,' 'curbstone operators,' 'puts' and 'calls,' 'cash,' 'regular,' 'buyers' option,' 'fancies,' 'milkers,' &c., &c. There are equally suggestive terms in use on the London Stock Exchange. Thus when stocks are depressed, they are 'banged;' when a speculator is bitten, he is on 'the tip;' when he becomes involved he is in 'the mets.'

A QUAKER WEDDING.—This morning, in despite of the falling rain, the Friend's Meeting House, at the northeast corner of Eutaw and Monument streets, was filled down stairs and up by a large and fashionable congregation, who had gathered together to witness the marriage of Mr. Nathaniel Crenshaw, of Richmond, and Miss Lizzie Joliffe, of this city. The groom and bride took the front seat facing the body of the church with the mother and uncle of the bride to her left.—The attendants occupied seats immediately in front facing the happy couple.

The bride was dressed in white satin with long train, trimmed handsomely. She wore a white bonnet with orange flowers, and a white opera cloak trimmed with white satin. Her dress was rich and elegant, and she was indeed a fair and beautiful bride to look upon. The groom was attired in a fashionable suit of black with white cravat and gloves. There were five bridesmaids and groomsmen.

For some time the happy couple, evidently impressed with the importance of the occasion, sat in deep silence and without motion, the bride with her eyes cast down to the ground. Amid the breathless silence that prevailed, they stood up, and Mr. Crenshaw, taking his affianced by the hand, said in a firm voice words to about the following effect: "I take thee, Elizabeth Joliffe, to be my wife, and I promise by Divine assistance to be to thee a loving and faithful husband until death do part us." To which she replied: "I take thee, Nathaniel Crenshaw, to be my husband, and I promise by Divine assistance to be a loving and faithful wife to thee until death do part us."

Mr. Francis T. King then read a declaration to the purport that the parties had declared their intention before the religious society, and had the consent of their surviving parents and their marriage was allowed at said meeting and that they had appeared in a public meeting and there made the declaration to be husband and wife. This declaration was then signed by the groom and bride, a table with pen and ink being placed before them. Mr. King then read further that the declaration had been signed by both, she taking after the marriage custom, her husband's name, and signing her new name of Crenshaw.

Dr. James Carey Thomas then delivered an elegant address on the passage, "For Godliness is profitable to all things, having possession of this world and the world to come."

The address had direct reference to the ceremony which had just taken place. The beauties of religious life were forcibly portrayed. After this address a venerable lady prayed for the happiness of the young couple.—This prayer was followed by another from an elderly member of the society. The bridal party then left the church, the groom, and bride first, followed in succession by their attendants.—Baltimore Commercial.

A JUVENILE ROMANCE.—Two children who work in one of the Chicopee (Mass.) factories, Eli Goodro, fifteen years old, and Louisa Stebbins, fourteen, fell downright in love so deep they determined, with an utter contempt of consequences, to go and get married, as grown folks do. Chicopee clerks and clergy very sternly and sensibly refused to grant a marriage certificate or ceremony, whereupon the decided youth came to this city, and obtained both. The Palmer Journal says the civil sanction was obtained from the city clerk, and the religious from Rev. Dr. Ide. At all events, they were successful in their visit, and started for Thorndike, there to spend the honeymoon until Louisa's parents should forgive them. They got as far as Palmer, on Wednesday evening, and spent the night in the depot—certainly a very elegant bridal chamber. But on Thursday morning the parental Stebbinses bore down on them ere the Thorndike craft hove in sight, and captured the outward bound adventurers. They wanted to separate the bold babies, but though Louisa, disheartened by the meagre outset of the voyage, was willing to haul off, Eli remarked, defiantly, that they had been gone and done it, and what did they mean to do about it?—Impressed by his view of the case, and by the advice of a Palmer justice to make the best of it, the parents relented and conveyed the precious pair home, triumphantly happy.

PRESBYTERIAN UNION.—The General Assemblies of both the Old and new School branches of the Presbyterian Churches meet in New York, on Wednesday, (19th,) and, during the present session it is expected the work of uniting these two powerful religious organizations, will be completed. Their proceedings will be watched with the deepest interest by the religious world and their union will be the first step towards uniting under one communion head all the various divisions of Presbyterians. This union cannot but prove advantageous to the cause of Christianity. The trifling differences between them have been the cause of bitter antagonism, that have been prejudicial to the interests of the churches of the Presbyterian faith, and were the result of prejudices that should long since given way to reason and a liberal Christian spirit. The prospect that the bigotry which has heretofore separated Christians espousing a common faith shall soon disappear, is an encouraging sign of the times, and the consummation of the proposed union will be hailed with joy by all evangelical denominations. Many of the ablest and most devoted divines of both churches are most earnestly engaged in promoting the work of reconciliation and consolidation.

☞Don't be discouraged if occasionally you slip down by the way, and others tread over you a little. Inother words, don't let a failure or two dishearten you; accidents will happen, miscalculations will sometimes be made, things will turn out differently from our expectations, and we may be sufferers. It is worth while to remember that fortune is like the skies in the month of April, sometimes cloudy, and favorable, and it would be folly to despair again in seeking the sun because to-day is stormy, so it is unwise to sink into despondency when fortune frowns, since, in the common course of things, she may be expected to smile again.

HOW TO LENGTHEN LIFE.—1. Cultivate an equable temper; many a man has fallen dead in a fit of passion.

2. Eat regularly, not over thrice a day, and nothing between meals.

3. Go to bed at regular hours. Get up as soon as you wake of yourself, and do not sleep in the day time, at least not longer than ten minutes before noon.

4. Work always by the day and not by the job.

5. Stop working before you are very much tired—before you are "fagged out."

6. Cultivate a generous and accomodating temper.

7. Never cross a bridge before you come to it, this will save half the troubles of life.

8. Never eat when you are not hungry, or drink when you are not thirsty.

9. Let your appetite come uninvited.

10. Cool off in a place greatly warmer than the one in which you have been exercising; this simple rule would prevent incalculable sickness, and save millions of lives every year.

11. Never resist a call of nature for a single moment.

12. Never allow yourself to be chilled "through and through;" it is this which destroys so many every year, in a few days' sickness, from pneumonia, called, by some, lung fever or inflammation of the lungs.

13. Whoever drinks no liquids at meals will add years of pleasurable existence to his life. Of cold or warm drinks the former are the most pernicious; drinking at meals induces persons to eat more than they otherwise would, as any one can verify by experiment; and it is excess in eating which devastates the land with sickness, suffering and death.

14. After fifty years of age, if not a day laborer, and sedentary persons after forty, should eat but twice a day in the morning and about four in the afternoon; persons can soon accustom themselves to a seven hour interval between eating, thus giving the stomach rest; for every organ without adequate rest will "give out" prematurely.—Hall's Journal of Health.

GO TO FARMING.—A good living is what comparatively few men succeed in making in village or city life, and yet nothing is more easy of accomplishment on the farm. Besides, there is a pleasure in cultivating and embellishing the earth, improving and increasing its products, and thus adding to the aggregate of human happiness. Why, then, should young men hesitate to be farmers? It is both profitable and honorable. It is the nearest approximation to independence that a man, as a member of society, can make. A gentleman farmer—and all farmers are, or should be, gentlemen—belongs to an order of nobility that is not indebted to place-holders for installation and may, if he chooses, be ranked among the greatest benefactors of the human race. Let the idle young men go to work on farms, and quit seeking third and fourth rate clerkships. In short, go to farming and quit begging.

HURRYGRAPHS.

Two London clergymen appropriated their sermons from the same source a few Sundays since. They were printed simultaneously in a Monday morning paper.

A machine has been invented and put in operation in California, which, it is said, has cut, thrashed, cleaned and sacked the wheat from 20 acres in 10 hours, with only three men to work it

At Dunstable, Mass., in 1651, dancing at weddings was forbidden, and in 1660 William Walker was imprisoned a month for courting a maid without the leave of her parents. In 1675 the wearing of long hair, and ribbons to tie it up, were prohibited by severe penalties.

The Chicago Tribune says that a business depression of more than ordinary weight is felt in that city. There is dullness in trade; the receipts and shipments of grain are below their usual average; and there is less than the usual demand for houses to rent and improved property for sale.

A curious card appears in a Texas paper. A man advertises that his brother is candidate for Sheriff of the County because he himself is disfranchised, but that he is to be the real officer. "You are voting for me," he says, "that is, for my benefit, and I am to receive all the pay, if my brother is elected."

A plumber of Davenport, Iowa, bought 35,000 pounds of army belt buckles at the Rock Island Government sale for about seven cents a pound. They cost nearly $1 a pound, and would have supplied an army of more than 200,000 men. They are to be melted down for the brass and solder.

In Dennisville and other places in New Jersey, a large business is done in raising cedar trees out of marshes in which they were buried many centuries ago. They are covered with peat. The wood raised from these buried forests is as sound as if recently felled, and is mostly made into shingles.

The following is an exact copy of a promissory note dated at Concord, Nov. 25, 1793: "For an old horse which I have bought of Mr. Isaac Dow, I promise to pay him $3 in wheat, or flour at cash prices; but if the horse does not live to get to Lebanon, and three days after he gets there, I am to give but $2 for the horse. Witness my hand."

The archives of the Holy Synod, St. Petersburg, which contains materials of the highest value for the history of the Russian Church and religious legislation, have remained but little known and almost inaccessible to the studies of the learned. The Emperor Alexander has just authorized the appointment of a special commission charged to place these documents in order, and to publish a certain number of them.

A man died recently in New Orleans, leaving one of the briefest wills on record. It consisted of five words: "Mrs. Roper is my heiress"—with a codicil of four or five words more. He then folded the sheet, stating in an indorsement that it was his will, to be opened only in case of his death, and to be executed by a certain named person, and that a copy of it was in the hands of his heiress. This will was contested in the courts, but its legality was sustained.

A NORWEGIAN GIANT.—Among a large party of Norwegian emigrants at the depot this morning was one immense individual named Lars Olson, whose height is seven feet eight inches, weight three hundred and twenty-two pounds, and age thirty-five years. He is on his way to some part of Minnesota, where he has a brother living, and where, we understand, he intends to settle down, and, by the way, he "settled down" on a bench at the depot and could not be persuaded to rise on his large feet, to satisfy the gaping crowd, refusing, pleasantly but firmly, to accept various offerings of money. An emigrant agent, who was with the company, says the giant's parents are of ordinary size, and that his Minnesota brother is not an uncommonly large man. Since his recent arrival in this country he has been offered several hundred dollars for a two weeks' exhibition, but would not accept.—Toledo Blade.

☞At Cleveland, Ohio, on Saturday, a most distressing casualty occurred, by the burying of three children under a land slide, from which their lifeless bodies were afterwards recovered. Recently an excavation has been made under an enbankment on Columbus street, and on Friday afternoon the overtopping earth gave way. Three children living near by were missed by their parents, and search was made for them through the city, their loss being also reported to the police. Nothing was heard of their whereabouts until Saturday afternoon, when the suggestion that they might have been buried under the fallen earth led to an investigation which resulted in the recovery of their bodies. They had been buried about 28 hours. They were two boys and a girl, aged five, four and three years. One family is made childless by the sad occurrence.

☞The gasometer at the Cincinnati gas works exploded on the 24th inst. One man was killed and several wounded. The loss to the gas company is $75,000. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

FIFTY YEARS AGO.

In what a wondrous age we live,
Not many seem to know;
But few the mighty change perceive,
Since fifty years ago:
Our ancestors did never dream,
When things moved very slow,
Of what we're doing now by steam—
Say fifty years ago.

Decoration Day.

Saturday last will be a day long to be remembered by our citizens and those who witnessed the ceremonies of decoration day in our borough. The principal ceremony was the strewing of flowers and wreaths on the graves of the fallen braves from this county that are buried in the Cemetery—a tribute of respect and gratitude to the heroes that we trust will be kept up until our nation shall cease to exist. At an early hour in the afternoon the Court House was filled with people, and the line of march was shortly taken up toward to the Cemetery headed by the Huntingdon Silver Cornet Band, which played the Dead March in such a sweet but mournful manner that not a few were so impressed with the solemnity of the occasion that the tears started to their eyes. A silent prayer was offered up for the brave fathers who slept as the boys and girls of the Cassville Soldiers' Orphans School marched past neatly dressed in army blue, and thankful indeed should every patriot be to see the loved ones of the dead soldiers fondly cared for and instructed at these homes which grace our Commonwealth.

On arriving at the Cemetery the order of exercises was opened by the Orphans singing "My country 'tis of thee," after which Rev. J. W. Plannett offered a prayer. Next followed reading of the General Orders of the G. A. R. in relation to the ceremony, when Milton S Lytle, Esq, then delivered the following address:

SOLDIERS AND CITIZENS:—On this memorial occasion, this second recurrence of our new national anniversary, we have assembled at the request of the surviving soldiers and in response to the sympathies of our own hearts, to render some token of honor and veneration to those who went down to death in that great struggle which is still so fresh in our remembrance.

And in doing this, is it not in accordance with the motives which should actuate us to hope for some incidental benefits to ourselves? May we not experience a renewal of our patriotism and feel a glow of gratification and delight in contemplating the perpetuity of national life which has been secured for us? If it be of any value to observe with fitting ceremonies the day that gave birth to our independence, how much more important that we commemorate, appropriately, the services that saved us from the most inglorious death that could have been aimed at a nation. Let us, "by public assembly and by solemn observance, by anthem and by eulogy," extol the valor and achievements of our national benefactors and render thanks to God for eminent blessings, early given and long continued, to our highly favored country.

We are here, my friends, for the purpose of placing wreaths of flowers and evergreens on the graves of our fallen comrades, whose remains lie in this Cemetery. This simple service is in honor of men for whom the last sad rite was not performed when they were borne to this final resting place—men who took their lives in their hands and boldly ventured and lost them in defence of the country they valued more than self. If we were to come here with each return of this beautiful season, and place the richest garlands on their mounds, if we were to shed floods of tears that could never be dried, if we were to inscribe their names on entablatures broad as the earth itself, the debt which we, as a people, owe them, could never be paid. How spiritless, how inexpressive, how insignificant is all that we can do or say to manifest our admiration and gratitude, compared with what they deserve?

Peace to the patriot's shade? Let no rude hand disturb the laurels that lest on his tomb!

"Let orphan tears bedew his sacred urn.
And fame's loud trump proclaim the hero's name,
Far as the circuit of the spheres extends."

But the purpose I have mentioned is not the only one for which we are here. Great and grand as that purpose is, yet the time and the occasion rise into sublimity when we remember that the ceremonies of to-day are figuratively designed to recall and preserve the memory of that vast army that lies intrenched on many fields. Those who sleep in honored graves among their kindred are but a few when we think of the thousands who went and returned not. I know that of this large assemblage of the living, by far the greater portion do not find here the more immediate objects of their affection and reverance. Each heart reverts to the scene of carnage in which it was bereaved. The name of every battle field is in our minds or on our lips. Touching and melancholy as it might seem, it would, nevertheless be a pleasure to tell you where and how those brave men fell, to recount their gallant deeds, their patriotic endurance and their self sacrificing devotion. But I cannot go from Gettysburg to the Rio Grande to point out each spot that was crimsoned by a soldier's blood. From Sumter to Appomattox, though but a few years, in point of time, embraced the events of ages. Those things have passed into history, and already fill a considerable part of its volumes. As we comprehend the extent of the theme, we see the inadequacy of words to do justice to the memory of the dead or to repay the services of those who survive.

With peculiar propriety, the humble tribute we endeavor to pay, by strewing the fresh flowers of Spring on the graves of departed worth, comes from the hands of soldiers. It is the work of those who were companions in the hardships and participants in the perils of the fallen—the veterans who have resumed the garb of civilians and returned to their peaceful pursuits and to their accustomed places in the community. If mothers forget not their sons, nor wives their husbands, nor orphans their fathers, nor sisters their brothers, neither will these men forget the comrades who fell by their sides. My voice is heard by ears that have caught the last words of the dying—flowers will be strewn to-day by hands that have closed expiring eyes, and laid the dead to slumber, with no "useless coffin" to enclose his breast, no "martial cloak" but the rough blanket in which he had often rested his weary limbs after the day's march. The performance of these tender and brotherly offices was a duty surpassed in sadness only by the necessity which sometimes came upon us of surrendering the field to an enemy that cared not to give decent sepulture to our dead and who buried them, if buried at all, where the graves will be forever unmarked and unknown.

Among the many results secured by these annual offerings, of honor and respect, the soldiers, who are now here as citizens, not only re-open the hearts of a generous and grateful people, but keep alive fraternal feelings among themselves. They are reminded again of the many occurrences of the war—the earliest as well as the latest. They think of the conflicts on the Peninsula, commencing almost with the disembarkation at Fortress Monroe, continuing up to the very gates of Richmond, including the Seven Days Battles, and ending when our army took refuge at Harrison's Landing. Then followed the withdrawal from the James river, the second disaster at Bull's Run and the retreat into Maryland, where, under Providence, we were permitted to retrieve the glory and reputation of our arms. I see those here who may well remember that September day on the banks of the Antietam. They have not forgotten the silent march of the night before, when not even a whisper was allowed in the ranks, not a sound that could warn the enemy of their movements. Rapidly passed the remaining hours that separated foe from foe, and such as the dawn dispelled the darkness,

"The affrighted air with a shudder bore,
Like a herald in haste to the chieftain's door;
The terrible grumble and rumble and roar,
Telling the battle was on once more."

Then came the hurried order to "fall in," and the ready obedience on the part of the troops. The long line was formed across the fields, and the steady advance began. Forward the column went, over the ground newly turned for the Autumn crop, through the woods that hid for a moment the battle's smoke, over fields well filled with the ripening corn, and over fences that intervened. On, still on, they pressed, undismayed by the bullets that whistled above their heads, or the gaps that were made in their ranks. There was no hesitation, no halting, until volley answered volley in the deadly strife.

"See the smoke, how the lightning is cleaving asunder!
Hark! the guns, peal on peal, how they boom in their thunder."

However minutely I might describe that drama of danger and death, I could add nothing to the knowledge of those around me who were actors in it. Perhaps I can remind them of no circumstance they are not already familiar with. Be it said to their lasting honor, that they went on that day where troops had never gone before, and where none went afterwards.

The limited time I can occupy to-day will not permit me to give even a passing notice to the more important of the battles in which soldiers from Huntingdon county were engaged. They fought and fell, not only on that line running directly south of us to the Potomac and beyond—not only in those contests which could almost be heard reverberating among your own hills—not only at Gettysburg, but at Chickamauga—not only in the Wilderness and at Richmond, but at Lookout Mountain, at Missionary Ridge, at Resaca, at Kenesaw, and at Atlanta. They were in from the first to the last, and went out not until the rebel chieftain had surrendered forever the miserable pretensions to nationality that had been made by the pseudo power he represented.

Nothing has been more thoroughly tried and proved by experience than the qualities of the American soldier. So numerous, indeed, are the evidences of his courage, his intrepidity, and his steadiness in battle, that it is impossible to tell what particular instance most demonstrates his merits. He has been described as the civilized, sober, well educated citizen, animated with the consciousness that he was fighting for a great cause, in the success of which he and his children had a deep, personal interest, and who learned obedience because both his common sense and his sense of duty recognized the necessity. I have said that he has returned to his peaceful avocation. Long may it be until he shall be called from it again. But we may feel a safe reliance on his strong arm, if it shall ever hereafter be needed to defend our country's interests against any foe, be it British dominion on the north of us, Mexican anarchy on the south, or Spanish despotism on the islands of the sea.

The presence of so many of the people of this community and county here to-day, shows that our eyes have not grown dull, our hands slack, nor our hearts cold in this sacred trust. The spirit that has brought us here, is very similar to that which has been displayed in other places by the erection of memorials to render secure and enduring the name and fame of our heroic fallen. How soon shall a monument rise heavenward from this ground to acquaint future generations with the mighty deeds that have been done in these days! Let us, in the first place, perpetuate the records of the men who accomplished this great work, and then transmit a knowledge of the means by which it was done. Let the hardships that have been endured, the difficulties that have been encountered, the perils that have been met, the examples of unselfish patriotism that have been given, and the romance that has been added to the story of the human race, go down together, unforgotten, through all coming time. I would embody in marble and brass the sentiment of the poet:

"And when their statues are placed on high
Under the dome of the Union sky,—
The American soldier's temple of Fame,
There with the glorious General's name,
Be it said in letters both bold and bright.
Here is the steed that saved the day
By carrying Sheridan into the fight
From Winchester—twenty miles away."

I cannot believe that any fail to realize and appreciate the sacrifice that has been made in defense of our personal safety, in maintenance of free government and in support of the integrity of the Union. Though we are not here to do honor in the durable and lasting manner in which it should be bestowed, though this ceremony is to be plain and unostentatious, yet we may trust that it will so sink into our hearts that the glory of their deeds and the light of their example will never fade.

After the address the Orphans sang a piece entitled "O'er my Father's Grave," after which the following poem was read by Mr. Robert McDivitt:

DECORATION POEM.

BY CORPORAL I. J. ATKINSON.

Canse!—cliff-girt Juniata,
Thy pines' Æolian moan!
Some "Storied Urn or Statue,"
Shall cheer the gloom
Of their dark tomb,—
The good who bled,—
Thy honored Dead
And brave of "Standing Stone."

When Freedom's loud Roveille
Stirred Gettysburg's dark field;
And Fiend of fell Rebellion
Piled hill and plain
With her brave slain;—
Their memories claim
A greener fame
Than stone and marble yield.

Comrades in death shall greet them
From many a field of gore,—
Bull Run and red Antietam,—
Where fierce the strife
'Gainst Freedom's life,
By Heaven accurst,
In thunder burst
Above Potomac's roar.

From Hundred of Bermuda,
From Richmond and Shiloh,
Atlanta, Chattanooga:—
To patriot eyes,
Her heroes rise!—
From every sod
Pale Freedom trod—
In those dark days of woe.

Shades of departed soldiers!
"Comrades of battle" slain!
Though the marred body moulders
In earth to rust—
Yet, o'er your dust—
Shall laughing May
And Flora gay,
Their wreaths and laurels train.

When blushing Borealis,
To north, wins Sol abroad;
Spring peops o'er hills and valleys;
With emerald sheen
To deck the green
Sward of the grave,
Where sleep the brave
Till roused by trump of God.

So as, from east, Aurora
Gilds earth with gorgeous day,
May soldiers' graves of glory,
Through tears and blood,
In beauty—bud;
And fragrant flowers,
In crimson showers,
Be wept upon their clay.

The members of the Post at this place then formed in line and marched to the graves of the soldiers, where they strewed the flowers and wreaths.

The ceremonies throughout were conducted in an acceptable manner—only one objection and that was the want of shade where the speaker stood—and the large number in attendance, from near and far, appeared gratified that they witnessed the proceedings.

The Soldiers' Orphans.

The Johnstown Tribune gives a long description of the visit of the Soldiers' Orphans' of the Cassville School to that place on the 19th and 20th ult. The entertainment which the 204 pupils received was highly satisfactory, and the entertainments given by the pupils were well received by the citizens. The total receipts of the entertainments were $577,21 including a special donation of $120,50 to buy a school room cabinet organ. The following statistics are published:

This institution has now been in operation for three and a half years, and the following statistics may be interesting:

Of the whole number admitted, there were 156 boys and 121 girls. Of those now present, there are 109 boys and 93 girls. Of the whole number admitted, there were 90 from Huntingdon county, 69 from Blair, 47 from Center, 31 from Cambria, 26 from Clearfield, 13 from Bedford, 1 from Franklin. These from Bedford and Franklin were transferred to White Hall.

Of those who have been discharged at the age of 16, there were, from Huntingdon, 11 boys and 5 girls—total, 16; from Blair, 12 boys and 3 girls—total, 15; from Center, 6 boys and 8 girls—total, 14; from Clearfield, 3 boys and 2 girls—total, 5; from Cambria, 2 boys and 3 girls—total, 5. Grand total, 34 boys and 21 girls.

The whole number admitted into the school represented 132 different families, of which 2 had 5 children each; 13 had 4 children each; 23 had 3 children each; 52 had 2 children and 42 were represented by 1 child each.

Of the whole number admitted, there were, of Methodist parentage, 131; Lutheran, 29; Baptist, 16; United B. 17; Presbyterian, 13; German Reformed, 5; Roman Catholic, 5; Disicpics, 5; Dunkard, 6; Church of God, 5; Congregationalist, 3; Universalist, 3; Adventist, 2; Albright, 2; and 35 are not given.

The faculty of the Cassville School is at present composed of the following persons: Superintendent, Rev. A. L. Guss; Teachers, Messrs. A. H. Weidman, Wm. Lyttle, W. L. Owen, S. W. Heaton, and Misses C. A. Phillips and A. L. Simonton. The Tribune concludes: The Soldiers' Orphans have come and gone! Their visit has been as already remarked, an occasion of great pleasure to them and to all our citizens. But it has been more than this. It has dispelled a vast amount of prejudice against the system which established and maintains these Orphan Schools, and our people have learned by eye and ear experience that the Cassville School is one of the best, if not the very best, of its class. The appearance, manners, attainments and spirit of the Orphans themselves tell the whole story. They are well cared for, properly educated, and contented and happy. What more could be desired for them? What man of patriotic and benevolent instincts would give them less?

DARING ROBBERY.—On Friday last a German emigrant was robbed of 4,000 francs between Mifflin and this city. The German had the money in a belt buckled around his waist, and says that when he arrived at a station west of Mifflin he went to a restaurant to get a glass of lager, and while there felt some one feeling about his person; but did not discover his loss until the train had proceeded some distance toward this city. The station spoken of must have been Huntingdon, that being the only station between Mifflin and Altoona where trains stop long enough to allow passengers to partake of refreshments. The belt was cut and slipped off. Another German having paid fair in the cars (an unusual occurrence among emigrants) to this city, on the arrival of the train suspicion rested upon him, but after diligent search, no clue whatever could be found to his whereabouts —Altoona Radical.

A Scare.

At a late hour on Wednesday night last a number of citizens of our town were aroused by an agonizing cry of "Oh!" which was continued about eight or ten times. The fears of those who heard it were awakened, and a dozen or more came to the Franklin House to see what was the matter.—The lower rooms were searched, but nothing was seen to verify the suspicions of some that a murder or some other awful tragedy had been committed. We were on the grounds ready to take notes, but our calculations in regard to something terrible to tell our readers, were somewhat frustrated by being informed that the unearthly noise was occasioned by a man in one of the upper rooms of the hotel, who it is said makes such yells in his sleep. We would advise him to eat light suppers and yell so no more.

Extract from a letter from Jerusalem,

"We started early to ascend Mt. Olivet, to behold the sun gild the minarets and towers of the devoted city, from the place where memory, stirred by a thousand associations, should exalt the mind as well as the eye to the inspiration of the scene. Well is the voyager repaid for long travels, horrid roads, antediluvian cookery, squalid companionship and the importunities of begging, thieving Arabs. Well would it have repaid you, oh! man of commerce and crucible! and well might you have been reminded of your own city, for here, painted upon a board nailed against one of the huge ancient olive trees, under which the sacred martyrs toiled for the sins of the world, eighteen hundred years ago, were these familiar figures, S. T.—1860—X. We do not know who did it, but no doubt some poor invalid traveler, cured by the Plantation Bitters, wishing to advertise their virtues in a place from whence all knowledge flows."

MAGNOLIA WATER.—Superior to the best imported German Cologne, and sold at half the price. tf

☞ Somebody "wants twelve young ladies in good circumstances, who help their mothers to get breakfast and wash the dishes." We don't know how it is in remote, benighted country districts, shut out from the latest fashions and the boasted lights of the nineteenth century—we don't know what kind of young ones are grown in such secluded districts, but the "twelve" need not be sought for where the lights of the century and fashion have fallen; in such places the article is no longer produced.

—A. R. Stewart & Co. have just received a large stock of Hardware, Cutlery, &c., suitable for the wants of the farmer, carpenter, painter, blacksmith, wagonmaker and others. 1†

LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—In considering the question whether it pays a man to invest at home, there are some things to be looked at. We have intimated that it depends upon what a man invests in, and the discretion he uses. A man might throw his money away, very easily. For instance: Somebody wants to make a speculation in oil, or in some other imaginary article (for which it requires a great deal of faith to realize the substance,) and away men go after the fancy idol, and in the end they lose their money, in a majority of instances. In this connection we might also mention lotteries, where a man will go ten or more dollars in the wild dream of realizing ten thousand. Numberless other ways might be mentioned, but one which claims particular attention, and which we hinted at before is the too great desire of many to follow in the same steps of another, instead of taking some other direction; in other words the folly of too many in starting the same kind of business. We have noticed that in our town no new thing lasts a year of itself. An enterprising man sees what the town wants, and he goes to the expense and trouble of getting it. When once in operation the hawks are around to find out whether it pays, and if it does, up starts a few more institutions of the same kind, which has the effect of disheartening the enterprising man, and fooling those who expected to make a fortune. Of course, the people are the gainers of the competition that immediately follows, but would it not be wiser for those who have money to invest to give it to some new object? IMPROVEMENT.

MARRIED,

On Thursday, 20th inst., by Rev. J. Frazier, Mr SAMUEL J. HETRICK, to Miss MARY A. SMELSER, all of Huntingdon County, Pa.

In Maryville, California, May 10th, at the residence of Mr. Van Dyke, by the Rev. Dr. McKaig, Mr. BENJAMIN RUSSELL, to MAGGIE J. MCDOWELL, late of Huntingdon, Pa. [Lewistown papers please copy.]

On the 27th ult., at the residence of the bride's father, by Rev. G. W. Gwynn, Mr. HUGH T. JOHNSTON, of Mooresville, to Miss HENNIE OAKS, of Massesysburg, this county.

On May 25th, by Rev. George W. Zahniser, assisted by Rev. O. O. McLain, JOHN M. BAILEY, Esq, to Miss LETTIE B. FISHER, both of Huntingdon, Pennsylvania.

The happy couple have remembered us in the midst of their felicity, and we take occasion to add our good wishes to the many now pouring in upon them, and sincerely hope that their brightest visions of future happiness and prosperity may be more than realized, and that no cloud of adversity may ever even for a moment cast its dark shadow across their pathway of life, and may they find never-ending happiness in the world to come.

DIED,

In Hill Valley, May 23, 1869, SARAH, wife of Henry Rhodes, aged 59 years, 7 months and 5 days.

"She sleeps in Jesus; happy thought;
Has reached at last the rest she sought,
From storms without and fears within,
She rests secure from pain and sin.

"Long she had walked life's weary way,
And wondered at his lengthened day;
At last a light shone in her room,
And Jesus whispered, 'Child, come home.'

In this borough on the 25th ult., Mrs. SUSAN NEWINGHAM, aged 89 yrs. 3 months and 2 days.

The deceased was the oldest lady in this borough, of which she has been a resident since a child, when the Indians were among its inhabitants. She would often repeat the exciting incidents in which she participated and which she observed, while they remained here. But now her voice is hushed in death; she passed the allotted time of three-score and ten, and we trust she has gone to her eternal home in heaven. How many of us, now living, and knowing the deceased, will live to the age she attained? Ah! we can truly exclaim, few indeed, if any.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

More Precious Than Female Suffrage.

The Creator has endowed woman with a most wonderful organism, but it is often sadly impaired and wasted by peculiar ills and wearing pains. The female sex will find in MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS a rare specific and tonic for every period in life. It will rescue the sex from the perils and dangers that threaten during the most critical periods of their existence, carrying them safely through every trying occasion, curing their former weak and sickly constitutions, driving away all chronic, scrofulous, organic, nervous, bilious and other disorders that have made their lives miserable. MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS will cure all forms of female difficulties from the earliest stage of female hallucinations, and in every condition of sickness peculiar to them. It will impart strength to the system, preserve and restore the beauty of face and form, and insure permanent health. Sold only by respectable druggists. my19-bom.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

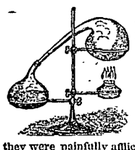
Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.



The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are surely marvellous. Inveterate cases of Scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unfelt tenant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a longer time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhea or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the trunkling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections and ailments of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

McGUIRE'S

SPANISH HAIR DRESSER

FOR PROMOTING THE GROWTH, BEAUTIFYING THE HAIR.

And rendering it dark and glossy. No other compound possesses the peculiar properties which so exactly suit the various conditions of the human hair. The use of this oil as a hair dresser has been universal in every section of the country in the Spanish Main for centuries.—No person using this article can give that elegant luxuriance and abundance of hair which have so often been the admiration of travelers in Spain. This oil is highly and delicately perfumed, forms an article unrivaled in excellence and upon which the Spanish people for many years have set its seal of enduring approval.

McGUIRE'S

Mexican Wild Flowers Shampoo Lotion

For removing dandruff and scurf from the head, whitening and perfuming the skin. This article is entirely different from any thing of the kind ever offered in this country and is warranted free from all poisonous substances. This valuable lotion was used by the Emperor Maximilian, and Empress Carlotta of Mexico, and universally used by Mexicans for three hundred years. As a wash for the head—it is cooling, cleansing and refreshing.—When thus used it at once relieves headache.

McGUIRE'S

WILD FLOWERS FOR THE TEETH.

All those who are in favor of white teeth and a pleasant and perfumed breath should at once use McGuire's Wild Flowers for the Teeth. All these preparations are put up in the most elegant and ornamental manner. We make no exception in saying that they are an ornament to a lady's toilet table, and none complete without them.

EASE AND COMFORT.

THE BLESSING OF PERFECT SIGHT.

There is nothing so valuable as PERFECT SIGHT, and PERFECT SIGHT can only be obtained by using PERFECT SPECTACLES! The difficulty of procuring which is WELL KNOWN.

Messrs. LAZARUS & MORRIS,

Occulists and Opticians,

HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT,

Manufacturers of the Celebrated

Perfected Spectacles

Have, after years of Experience, Experiment and the erection of costly machinery, been enabled to procure that grand desideratum,

PERFECT SPECTACLES!

which have been sold with unlimited satisfaction to the wearers in Massachusetts,

Rhode Island,
Connecticut,
New Hampshire,
Vermont and
Maine,

during the past nine years.

Those Celebrated Perfected Spectacles never tire the eye, and last many years without change!

Messrs. Lazarus & Morris have appointed

Mr. AARON STEWARD,

HUNTINGDON, PA.

SOLDIERS' HEIRS, ATTENTION!

The act of Congress approved March 2, 1867, gives to Heirs of Soldiers who died prisoners of war,

COMMUTATION FOR RATIONS,

for the time the soldier was so held a prisoner, at the rate of twenty-five cents per day, to be paid in the following order: 1st. To the widow, if unmarried; 2d. To the children; 3d. To the parents, or both jointly if they are living, if either is dead, to the survivor; 4th. To the brothers and sisters.

The act of February 28, 1867, provides for the refunding of the $300 Commutation Money, where the same person was again drafted, and was required to enter the service or furnish a substitute.

DISCHARGED SOLDIERS.

The act of March 2, 1867, also makes provisions for the payment of the

$100 ADDITIONAL BOUNTY

to such soldiers as have accidentally lost their discharges

All persons having any claims under any of the above mentioned Acts, or any other kind of claim against the United States or State Governments, can have them promptly collected, by addressing the undersigned. Information and advice cheerfully given to soldiers or their friends, free of charge.
